

In The Name Of Art: The Mercedes GL450 Goes For A Swim

{mosgoogle right}What happens when you take a new GL450 , submerge it in a giant water tank, then throw in the sultry Eva Mendez clad in a delectably form- accentuating couture gown swimming alongside the said Mercedes model? The answer of course is art, and thanks to photographer Michael Muller, we now have an accurate representation of what exactly the aforementioned art looks like. In a recent art project entitled 'Quiet', Michael photographs this as well as twenty-four other underwater scenarios, all of which aim to portray the silence and stillness one experiences when underwater. The exhibit is part of an effort to raise money for The Art of Elysium in Universal City, California, with all proceeds from the sale of 'Quiet' pieces going to benefit the not-for-profit organization...
