

World Premier Of The Mercedes-Benz E-Class Guard Special Protection Model

{mosgoogle right}Now that the 2010 Mercedes-Benz E-Class has made its world debut, it's time for some special variants of the model, starting with the special protection Guard model. Although on the surface it looks virtually identical to a traditional E-Class sedan, the E-Class Guard boasts a wealth of "intelligently conceived protective features." Highlights include a passenger cell constructed of high-strength steels and aramide components, all-around polycarbonate glazing, an optional emergency alarm system and optional underbody armour. As a result, the Mercedes E-Class Guard meets the protection class of VR4 (formerly B4) "enough to withstand handgun bullets of up to .44 Magnum in caliber. With the optional underbody armor, the entire underfloor area of the passenger cell is resistant to attack with a DM51 hand-grenade. Mercedes Guardian
